A kind old man name George was taking his dogs for a walk in the forest one day. All of a sudden a cougar jumped out of the bushes, leaping towards his back. As fast as the cougar had appeared, George's dogs turned and lunged for the cougar. In less than five seconds the assault was over. Barking and growling faded into the distance, as the dogs chased the cougar into the woods. George just sat there on the ground. He prayed out loud in thanks, holding his chest. His dogs soon returned, and he hugged them, crying with joy.

One quiet sunny Sunday afternoon, Wilma and Henry were sitting on the porch. They were watching five little kids play in front of their house. Suddenly a wild cougar sprinted full speed from between two houses. It was headed towards the children. Wilma and Henry were terrified and didn't know what to do, except yell. Henry and Wilma were yelling at the kids to run. Suddenly they saw three large Rottweiler dogs race down the street towards the cougar. A very short fat man was following the dogs, in a candy red pickup truck. Henry knew the man, and yelled, "YEEHOO!! Get him George!" The cougar never reached the kids, running away once it saw George's dogs.
