Wednesday morning, Jack ran down the hall yelling, "I'm sorry mom, I'm coming down now!" Jack's mother Kathryn was standing in the kitchen holding a pan full of bacon in her left hand. She was holding a spatula in the other hand. Ten seconds later Jack came bursting into the kitchen to sit down at the dining room table for breakfast. Kathryn said, "If you came the first time I called you then your food wouldn't be cold. Calling you five times makes me mad. No video games today." Jack sat in his chair eating his food slowly, and sobbing quietly.

The basketball was coming right for Susan's face and she wasn't ready to catch it. The Burns High School girls-basketball team was warming up for a game. It was Monday night, and Susan was distracted by a boy. The next thing she knew was that she was lying on the gym floor with the ceiling spinning in circles. Her nose felt hot and wet, and she couldn't hear anything for a few seconds. Brianna picked her up and said, "Oh wow, that ball probably broke your nose... 'cause you're bleeding a lot!" As the girls walked to the coach, Susan glanced at the boy she was looking at in the bleachers. She then put her hand over her face in embarrassment.
